The following choice bit of word painting occurs in Hawthorne's Marble Faun: "The woman's eye, that has discovered a new star, turns from its glory to send the polished little instrument gleaming along the hem of her kerchief, or to dart a casual fray in her dress. And they have greatly the advantage of us in this respect. The slender thread of silk or cotton keeps them united with the small, familiar, gentle interests of life, the continually operating influences of which do so much for the health of the character, and carry off what would otherwise be a dangerous accumulation of morbid sensibility. A vast deal of human sympathy runs along this electric line, stretching from the throne to the wicker chair of the humblest seamstress, and keeping high and low in a species of communion with their kindred beings."

Unpardonable Offenses.

Certain sins of omission and commission there are for which there is neither forgiveness nor absolution. A woman will forgive the man she loves for squandering her fortune, destroying her peace of mind, dishonoring the name he has given her, but woe be unto him if he forgets to kiss her good-bye when he goes down town in the morning, says the New York Sun. He may take off his coat, roll up his shirt sleeves, take a week off for it, buy flowers, bonbons, theater tickets, be so good and penitent that he doesn't know himself and has to be introduced to his mirror every morning—he can't make that right until the crack of doom. She never forgives and forgets that, even if she says she does.

Another unpardonable sin is to spell a man's name wrong. You may tread on his toes, steal his umbrella, cheat him, give him the wrong points on the races, but don't spell his name wrong if you desire him for a friend.

A woman never forgives a man for criticising her perfume; a man hates the fellow that runs down the brand of cigars he likes.

A woman may forgive the man who puts his umbrella down where it will drip all over her in the car; she never forgives the woman that sits down next to her with a dress that spoils hers.

A little woman rather likes to be called a pussy or a chicken by a big, goodnatured man, but she never forgives him if he calls her a cat or an old hen.

She never forgives the woman that coaxes her servants away by offering them better wages, or the woman who knows her age and tells it, or the woman the man she likes admires and praises, or the woman who always looks a little finer, dresses a bit handsomer, does things a shade better than she can herself. We all know that woman and hate her, while we smile into her eyes and kiss her good-bye, acknowledging ourselves her inferior. No woman sits down and bewails her inability to wear the Astor diamonds or to rival the famous beauties of the world, but it is the woman who buys one more gown than we can afford, who keeps two servants when we have only one, who fades our pinks with her roses and dulls our charms with her graces whom it is hard to forgive as we would be forgiven.

It Greatly Relieved Him.

That he was deeply pained was evidenced by the pallor of his face and the heaving of his bosom.

With one hand he pressed his brow while with the other he clutched the arm of the chair. His breathing was labored and tumultuous and in less than three seconds his necktie had worked itself above his collar.

He was obviously distraught. "Yes," the girl repeated gently, "I am going to marry another."

"Will you?"

He bent an appealing, moving glance upon her.

"Tell me who he is?"

"Yes." She bent forward and whispered a name.

"Thank!"

The anxious foreboding in his face instantly gave place to an exultant joy.

"Heaven, I feared he might be a friend of mine. I congratulate you with all my heart!"

And when he left the house his step was light and elastic.—Atlanta Constitution.

It Is Just That Way.

When Mrs. Simpkins remarked that she must go to the dressmaker, Mr. Simpkins said:

"I should think you would keep away from dressmakers, my dear."

"That's just like you, Mr. Simpkins. Why shouldn't I go to the dressmaker's if I wish to, I should like to know?"

"Because, my love, they all have designs on you."

And she didn't know whether to laugh or cry.—Buffalo Express.

Decidedly a Back Number.

First Chapter—What character does Miss Budd represent to-night?

Second Chapter—Why, she's dressed as a page.

First Chapter—And Miss Pascoe?

Second Chapter—Oh, she's a page, too.

First Chapter—Page two? She looks more like the last leaf.—Judge.

More Senses Than Five.

Teacher—How many senses are there?

Tommy Tucker—Five.

Teacher—That is right. What is your hand raised for, Benny Bloomer?

Benny—Please, ma'am, there have been eleven censuses taken so far.—Judge.

Grover and David.

"What do you think of Senator Hill now?" asked State Senator Bill Brown of Grover Cleveland.

"Oh, he's a good fellow," said the President-elect. "I wouldn't say a word against him, for formerly, you know, we belonged to the same political party."—Mt. Vernon News.

A Chance for Keeley.

"My, oh, my!"

"What's the matter?"

"Cleveland's Cabinet is full."—Washington Star.

Persons who are subject to attacks of bilious colic can almost invariably tell by their feelings, when to expect an attack. If Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is taken as soon as these symptoms appear, they can ward off the disease. Such persons should always keep the Remedy at hand, ready for immediate use when needed. Two or three doses of it at the right time will save them much suffering. For sale by all dealers. The Shirt Maker's Revenge.

Hold your orders for Johnson is coming. The shirt maker is on the way. Look out for his whiskers for they are leaking. Till you hear what he has to say.

Respect to Johnson the bluffer justly paid. And noble shirt maker honored his joblots shade. But whence this being? that a name so mean. Should join with Johnson the shirt man, on a tomb to be seen.

This Johnson would better far proclaim. To future ages humble his job lots name. Johnson and shirt maker had been well paid. The city collector and the city bard.

Now import all your so called shirt makers. To take my honest living away if you can. I came to these Islands to work like a man. Here will I stay in spite of your teeth. For all kinds of shirt will I make to look neat.

"LAST BUT NOT LEAST."

I do all the shirt cutting that is done at my place of business and in case the shirts don't give entire satisfaction I will alter them, make new shirts or refund the money. All shirts that I make will be kept in repair for 2 years free of charge.
